

Haunted Theaters of the Carolinas

Journey through haunted theaters in historic North and South Carolina! Learn history behind-the-scenes and meet the ghosts inhabiting the stages. The father of John Wilkes Booth moves objects at the Dock Street Theater in Charleston, and a ghost at ImaginOn in Charlotte calls out visitors names. Discover the origin of superstitions surrounding the theatrical world why its good luck to wish someone to break a leg, and what a ghost light is really for! From some of the oldest haunted spots in North America, read about the Lost Colony on North Carolinas Outer Banks where a disembodied voice whispers for visitors not to be afraid, and brand-new buildings like the ImaginOn in Charlotte. These stories are proof that not all the spooky characters and effects in these theaters appear on the stage.
