

Dawn of the Awakened Mind (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Dawn of the Awakened Mind
It was in truth the Dawn of the Awakened Mind to me, when I first received and realized the truth, made known and proved to me through psychic revelations. The Testaments, both Old and New, contain much recorded evidence of spirit return and communication; and of numerous psychical phenomena, not miraculous, but as spirits themselves demonstrate and tell us, under the operation of natural laws, not yet fully understood. But as natural law may and does repeat itself today, why argue against the possibility of psychical phenomena? Surely no grander truth could ever be established by proofs, than communication between the two worlds. Beliefs are mostly hereditary, and may be right, or may sometimes be wrong, as I have illustrated in Chapter X. So I reasoned, and determined to investigate; and in this book are recorded a few of the results among many hundreds I have had in the way of experiences, and evidences obtained in my devious, intricate and I may add unpopular pathway of psychical research, consuming a period of about twenty-five years. Like an explorer in an unknown country, without mortal guide; and fully realizing various dangers, and possibilities of attack by certain claimants of the territory, I followed no beaten path of investigation to reach the truth. Having a mental compass of impression or intuition pointing steadily in one direction, I travelled on my solitary way, ever hoping to reach the destination which I strove to attain, examining here and there at long or short intervals and minutely, what to me was new, or evidential of communication between the two worlds. I found - by extensive travelling in quest of psychics, by patience, perseverance, and constant thoughtful and careful investigation, regardless of opinions, criticism, time or expense - that with each psychic my experience
