

A Dream, and Other Tales of Debauchery: The Collected Works of Howard Longfellow (VOLUME I)

Well dear, here is our husband for our stay here. As she said this she laughed. I told her I did not understand her, and at this she seemed surprised and handing me the box told me to open it and examine the contents, I did so and reposing in the box was an exact replica of the male generative organs. I was surprised and she seeing the look on my face asked me if I never saw a dildo before, I told her I had not and she told me that if I were willing she would soon show me what it was and its use. Originally sold under-the-counter during the 1920s and 1930s, these Tijuana Bibles as they were known contained the most salacious of stories known in its day. Short but titillating these pamphlet style novellas still broker shock and curiosity from those a collector of once-suppressed erotica. Contained herein are four tales from the pseudonymous and suggestively named author Howard Longfellow; tales of Lesbian tribadism and milk filled godemiche, first-time group-menages, and seduction by way of forbidden literature. Nothing is left to the imagination in this wonderfully graphic collection of lust and lasciviousness.
